THIRD CLASS CITY COMMISSION BILL MAY PASS TONIGHT

House Is Expected to Approve Revolutionary Municipal Measure.

MAY BECOME LAW IN A WEEK

In Harrisburg, Where Opposition Was Most Pronounced, Candidates are Already Coming Out; Big Appropriations Bill is Nearing Its Goal.

HARRISBURG, June 2.—Tonight at 10 o'clock the Clark bill providing for the commission form of government in third-class cities, a measure which will revolutionize the government of the municipalities between 10,000 and 100,000 will be laid before the House and it is expected to pass with little opposition.

The bill was amended in many respects on second reading last Tuesday. Some ideas from Williamsport and other places were incorporated in the measure. In Harrisburg, where the opposition was strongest, men have actually commenced to announce themselves as candidates for commissioner at the November election, although the bill is not yet a law.

If the bill is passed finally tonight it will be sent to the senate for concurrence in the amendments made in the House and in the special committee of the judiciary special committee in charge of it. These consist chiefly in providing salaried officers shall serve out terms, regulation of the initiative and referendum and a number of minor matters. The bill may reach the Governor by the end of the week.

Indications are that the general appropriation bill will be reported to the House tonight provided the amounts needed to provide for the new Public Service Commission, the Fire Marshals' Department and the new Department of Labor and Industry can be determined. Members of the sub-committee in charge have completed most of the items and will submit the bill to a meeting of the general committee tonight.

In the windup of the work it has been found that there are several bills which have become laws and carry appropriations which never went through the committee. These items will probably total $100,000.

The committee probably will close up its work this week and the state fair, numerous bridge bills, new arsenal, state water supply and a number of other measures are to be acted upon. The committee probably will report a bill carrying more than $40,000,000.

T. R. NO DRUNKARD.

Editor Newett Admits Libel and Colonel Gets Six Cents.

United Press Telegram.

MARQUETTE, Mich., June 2.—The libel suit of Theodore Roosevelt against George A. Newett, editor of Iron Ore, came to an abrupt close on Saturday when Editor Newett, on the stand, admitted that his statement that Roosevelt is a drunkard had no foundation.

The Colonel asked that only nominal damages be awarded. He was then given six cents damages by the jury. Roosevelt stated that the verdict accomplished what he desired—to set at rest the slanders against his character.

LOTS OF PICNICS.

West Penn Has a Busy Week for the Two Pleasure Parks.

The West Penn has a busy week of it ahead. At Shady Grove and Oakford are picnics which must be handled. Today the Uniontown schools are holding their outing at Shady Grove and Manager Coyle expects in the neighborhood of 5,000 visitors. On Wednesday the Connellsville schools will go to that park.

Tuesday Greensburg schools picnic at Oakford and on Thursday the Jeannette schools will be found at the same place.

The delayed fireworks display is scheduled to be put off at Shady Grove this evening.

TAKES VALLEY VIEWS.

C. H. Balsley Invades Indian Creek Field for Pictures.

Charles H. Balsley went up the Indian creek valley yesterday with his moving picture camera and filmed the many picturesque spots along the Indian Creek Valley railroad.

The fine weather yesterday took many pleasure seekers to the mountain. The day was more enjoyable than Memorial Day, when rain in the afternoon spoiled the fun.

William G. Johnston Dies.

William G. Johnston, a native of Pittsburg, is dead at his home in Watertown, N. Y. He was active in the publishing business. Mr. Johnson was born in 1828 and was one of the first to go to California for gold. He was an author and a writer. Mr. Johnston attended the old Bellevernon Academy in his younger days. His son, Stewart Johnston, married Miss Eleanor Hogg of Connellsville.

Traffic Record Broken.

ALTOONA, June 2.—Freight traffic on the middle division of the Pennsylvania railroad last month was the largest in several years. During the month 206,000 cars passed over the division, an increase of 1,500 over the high record of the same month in 1907.

WILSON WILL BOSS PROBE OF TARIFF BILL LOBBYISTS

President Makes It Clear That He Will be the Business End of the Investigation.

United Press Telegram.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—President Wilson announced today that he will assume personal charge of the lobby investigation in the Senate. Wilson will be boss of the probe. He indicated this today when he summoned to the White House two of the senatorial members of the probe committee.

Senator Overman, of North Carolina, chairman of the committee, and Senator Reed of Missouri, a member, have been requested at the President's direction to hold a conference with the Executive this afternoon. At this conference Wilson intends to indicate upon what lines the investigation shall be conducted. He will offer suggestions to the senators and these suggestions will be followed out as to the scope and methods of procedure.

The President told the newspaper correspondents this morning that he does not contemplate testifying before the committee. He said he has not been asked to testify and he does not think it will be necessary for him to take the witness stand.

All of the evidence in possession of the President will be placed in the hands of the committee. A large batch of papers has been collected and they will be sent to Senator Overman this afternoon.

A special subcommittee began its questioning of all members of the upper house this morning to endeavor to ascertain who is at work endeavoring to influence legislation; what steps are being taken; whether any legislation has been interfered with and whether any legislators are implicated.

CANDIDATES NAMED

Railroaders Want to be Delegates to Relief Convention.

In connection with the election of delegates to attend the convention of the relief department of the Baltimore & Ohio at Pittsburg on June 26 and 27, several employes of the Connellsville division have announced themselves as candidates. The election will be held during the week of June 12.

Those who have already announced their candidacy are: George W. Scott, chief clerk of the master mechanic; G. H. Tipton, coal billing agent; Walter H. Cottom, bridge inspector; C. W. Crim, water station repairman; G. Daniels, extra gang foreman; T. S. May, yard brakeman; M. A. Campbell, tender repairman; S. H. Bitner, extra gang foreman, and S. M. Tressler, section foreman.

The convention will be held in the Fort Pitt Hotel, with delegates in attendance from all divisions in the Pittsburg section. One member of the operating committee and four members of the advisory committee are to be chosen.

WANTS TO CASH HIS CHECK

Pittsburger Imagines He Has $300,000,000 Deposited.

UNIONTOWN, June 2.—George Drummond, aged 35 of Pittsburg, well-dressed and sober, called at the First National Bank of Uniontown Saturday and attempted to cash his personal check on the First National Bank of Pittsburg for $500,000. He told the cashier here that he had a cash deposit of $300,000,000 in the First National Bank of Pittsburg. He was unknown to the bank officials here and they summoned the county detectives, who detained Drummond pending an investigation into his sanity.

Drummond told John Smith that he wished to get the $500,000 in cash quickly in order to equip the biggest carnival in the world. He declared that he intended to buy 20 organs at $8,000 each, 60 large auto trucks to carry the carnival tents and 50 7-passenger touring cars in which to carry the show people.

SEEKS MAN HERE.

State Cop Looks for a Bolivar Fugitive in Connellsville.

Dominic Macedonio, who shot and seriously wounded a Bolivar constable last Friday, is thought to be in hiding in Connellsville. Detective F. M. Ames of the state police was in town yesterday looking for the man, for whose arrest he holds a warrant charging felonious wounding.

Macedonio is charged with shooting the officer during a brawl on Memorial Day. The man was fighting with another foreigner, and when the policeman interfered, Macedonio, it is claimed, shot him and then escaped.

Ames traced him this far, but yesterday afternoon lost the trail. Chief of Police George Hetzel has been instructed to be on the lookout for him.

FIREBOSS IN COURT.

Hearing is Held Over Question of Revoking Certificate.

A hearing was held Saturday in the case of William Nedley of Star Junction, a fireboss accused by Mine Inspector Charles P. Byrne with violating the mining laws.

Nedley is charged with being intemperate and the request is made that his certificate be revoked. Judge Van Swearingen took the matter under advisement.

Arrested as Trespasser.

Charged with illegal train riding, William Shipley and Charles Wild, arrested last night by Officer M. F. Wiltbere of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, were given 48 hours this morning when arraigned before Burgess J. L. Evans.

Immigrants Go West.

A long train of immigrants, going to western points, passed through Connellsville this morning over the Baltimore & Ohio.

JUNE COURT TERM OPENS; A MURDER CASE IS STARTED

Judge Umbel Delivers Usual Charge to Grand Jury.

J. C. BROWNFIELD IS FOREMAN

Immediately After a True Bill is Returned, Tony Fratteo is Placed on Trial for Killing at Dickerson Run on March 30; Other Routine Doings.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, June 2.—The June term of court opened today with both judges on the bench. The charge of the grand jury was delivered by Judge R. E. Umbel. It contained no features, being confined to the usual instructions given that body. John C. Brownfield, tax collector of South Union township, was named foreman.

Immediately after the grand jury returned its first bill, that against Tony Fratteo, the prisoner was placed on trial for the murder of Benino Andre at Dickerson Run on Sunday, March 30. Twelve jurors were examined but none of them had been accepted when court adjourned at noon. District Attorney Shelby, assisted by H. W. Byrne, is conducting the prosecution. Fratteo is defended by Attorneys Clark, Jeffries and Brownfield.

The grand jury went to work rapidly, returning the following true bills: Tony Fratteo, murder; Mary S. Zitney, infidelity; Ignatz Cantur, offense against morality; Max Shultz, assault and battery; A. H. Liston, assault and battery.

Clifford J. Swaney, accused of desertion and nonsupport, was released under $300 bail for trial at the September term.

On petition of H. G. May that the bridge over Poplar run in Springfield township be taken over by the county, Lee Smith, W. H. Binns and J. H. Miller were named viewers.

BLOW AGAINST WOOD

Prosecution Scores in Trial of the Wool Trust's Head.

United Press Telegram.

BOSTON, June 2.—The prosecution scored a point in the trial of William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company charged with being implicated in the planting of dynamite about Lawrence during the textile strike, when Arthur Pira, chauffeur of a taxicab went upon the witness stand and swore to having driven a man similar to Ernest Atteaux to the point indicated by James J. Breen in his confession of having secured $500 from Atteaux for planting the dynamite.

Although he was put through a severe cross examination the chauffeur stuck to his original story, the defense being unable to shake his testimony in any essential feature.

The state for the first time today was successful in its efforts to force the connecting link between the three defendants.

AGED MAN IS DEAD.

Joseph W. Clark of Wooddale Had Been Ill Long Time.

Joseph W. Clark, 77 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, died Saturday night at his home near Wooddale following a lingering illness. Funeral tomorrow at 12.30 o'clock from the house. Services will be held at 2 o'clock from the Stauffer church. Interment in Stauffer cemetery.

Mr. Clark was a retired farmer and spent virtually all his life in Bullskin township. He was born May 14, 1836 and was a son of John and Rosanna Dairy Clark. He was twice married. His first wife died about eight years ago. In addition to his second wife he is survived by a family of grown children.

STOPS RUNAWAY.

Riccardo Vigo Averts Serious Mishap by His Coolness.

As a horse attached to a buggy in which two men were seated descended the western approach of the Yough bridge Saturday afternoon, the animal became frightened and got beyond control of the driver. It raced rapidly down the incline and turned sharply towards the West Side Hotel.

As the horse neared the curb, Riccardo Vigo, who was standing on the sidewalk, sprang to its head, stopping the mad dash before the animal could plunge into the building.

BAPTISTS COMING.

Big Church Convention Opens Here on Thursday.

Everything is in readiness for the annual meeting of the Pittsburg Baptist Association to be held in the Connellsville church Thursday and Friday of this week.

The church has undergone a number of improvements and over 300 delegates will be entertained. Dinner and supper will be served in the dining-room of the church by members of the Ladies' Aid Society.

False Alarm Sounds.

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning the fire department responded to a false alarm from box 442, corner of Gibson avenue and Eighth street.

Auto Truck in Service.

The new auto truck purchased by the West Penn was placed in operation today.

PENROSE IS FREE FOR SOME RECREATION NOW

First Time in a Decade Senior Senator Has Not Been Penned in Washington.

Special to The Courier.

HARRISBURG, June 2.—Senator Penrose's visit to Harrisburg last week had a wonderfully clarifying effect upon both the legislative and political situations; and as one of its results, and perhaps the most important one, it is now apparent that if the Legislature does not go on record as being the most progressive law-making body that has sat at this capital since the present constitution went into effect in 1874, it will not be because the regular Republican organization is opposed to progressive measures. The senator put himself upon record as being in favor of measures along advanced lines. In his talk in the House he complimented the members of that body for passing bills that provide for better election regulations and higher social and economic conditions throughout the state. In the Senate he let it be known that he is in no wise in sympathy with obstruction tactics.

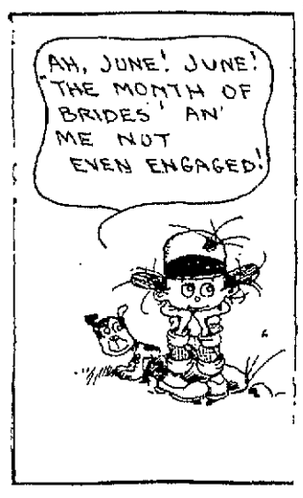

Senator Penrose does not come to Harrisburg often. His public career began here and he naturally has a friendly feeling for this city and this section of the state, but in recent years his duties as one of the most influential members of the National Senate have prevented his visiting much. An occasional trip to the Rocky Mountains is the only let up he has been able to obtain in the last ten years. Now that control of the Senate has shifted to the Democrats he will be able to get away from Washington more frequently, and as he is an avowed candidate to succeed himself at the expiration of his present term he will, without a doubt, avail himself of this new leisure to renew acquaintances throughout the state he has so ably and so long represented at Washington. In the course of a conversation while he was in this city the senator said he approved of senatorial primaries for many reasons, but that the best feature of them is that they compel candidates for the honor to get in touch with the people.

One of the things that the people of Pennsylvania are going to learn during the senatorial primary campaign is that Penrose is a most efficient extemporaneous speaker. His faculty in this particular is one of the things that is going to prove that he is "just folks like the rest of us." When he writes a speech it is as precise in marshalling of facts and in its diction as the product of a pedagogue, but when he delivers these speeches if he is surprised into a digression along a line that interests him he invariably becomes an interesting and convincing orator.

It is the opinion of Senator Penrose, if words dropped here and there during the course of his visit to this city may be accepted as an expression of opinion, that the tariff will be the paramount issue during the campaign of next year. His recent fight in the Senate to secure hearings on the schedules of the Underwood bill was not, he said, to obstruct the inevitable passage of that bill but, if possible, to let in the light on the tariff situation. The senator is of the opinion that many Pennsylvania industries are menaced by the terms of the Democratic tariff and he is anxious that the actual facts be brought out.

Landing Members for Club.

A lively campaign for new members of the recently organized Connellsville Automobile Club is now in progress. On Saturday fully 50 new members were added to the roll through the personal solicitation of the membership committee. Of this number Burgess J. L. Evans, W. L. Work and Vid J. Clark secured the applications of 50 candidates.

STUDENTS HEAR THE ANNUAL SERMON AT COLONIAL THEATRE

Rev. J. Knox Montgomery Delivers Baccalaureate Address.

CLASS DAY PROGRAM SUCCESS

Students Do Splendidly in Unusual Program Arranged by Miss DeHaven; Big Crowd Attends and Loudly Applauds Each Member.

The Colonial Theatre was crowded last evening, when the annual baccalaureate sermon to the members of the graduating class of the high school was delivered by Rev. J. Knox Montgomery, president of Muskingum College, New Concord, O. Rev. R. C. Wolf presided, introducing the speaker of the evening. Previous to his introduction an anthem "Benedic Anima," was sung. Rev. H. E. Cairns delivered the invocation and Rev. Ellis B. Burgess read the scripture lesson. Rev. W. J. Everhart offered prayer.

Dr. Montgomery's theme was "The Home, the School, the Church and Society." The educator delivered the address in an entertaining and instructive manner. While speaking primarily to members of the senior class, he called the attention of parents to one of the first requisites in educating children properly.

"First," he said, "make the home environment right. It matters little to what extent teachers in the public schools go in their efforts to educate the child, if the home is not what it should be, the work is much more difficult and oftimes less satisfactory than if home conditions were otherwise.

"The man who does not make every effort in behalf of his child, who does not strive to bring them up in the right manner, is a bad citizen, one of the worst citizens, in fact, of any community. The child of today is the business man, the leader of tomorrow. Therefore, great care should be exercised in his education.

"While the home is most important in the child's education, the public school is even more important. The youth spends on an average of five hours a day nine months in a year in the public school. It is right and proper that the schools have the best teachers, and it is a fact that in virtually every community only excellent teachers are employed. The influence exercised over the pupil in the schools during his life is the influence that governs his actions in after life. If the influence is for good, the student is usually well equipped to battle with the world after graduation."

On Saturday evening the class day exercises were held in the Colonial. Something out of the ordinary was presented. The evening's entertainment was entitled "An Extra Edition of the Ladies' Home Journal." The first scene represented a cover design: "Modern Education," showing students in the pursuit of their up-to-date studies. Next came the cereal advertisement, with James Clopton giving a very natural impersonation of the negro who grins forth from magazines and billboards.

Catherine Hart and Bertha King held the stage for several minutes, exchanging the anecdotes which localized the "That Reminds Me" page.

Emma Grace Dunn read a continued story. It was a generous installment, well prepared, and illustrated by tableaux. Jack Horowitz gazed into the future of his classmates in the role of the "Arabic Diviner."

One of the best numbers of the evening was the page of "Celebrities," as presented by Max Floto, with illustrations. The "celebrities" were members of the faculty. Everyone in the audience enjoyed the good-natured fun that was poked at the teachers.

Seniors in caps and gowns sang the "Page of Music."

Jean Evans had fun with her classmates acting as "Laura Jean Libby" answering letters on "Girls' Affairs." Lillian Melnick proceeded, with the assistance of models, to show the different styles prevailing among students on entering high school and leaving it.

Ruth Cunningham's short story, "Cupid Versus Diamond Heels," profusely illustrated, was decidedly clever.

Although applause was generous at all times, Percy Sheetz won the only curtain call by his splendid "Bachelor's Soliloquy." It was long and difficult to memorize, but it was delivered without a single halting moment. Girl members of the class added to the attractiveness of the act. The lines were original.

The concluding numbers included a parody on Secretary Bryan's fondness for grape juice, depicting a state dinner at which a certain popular brand of the beverage was served. George Moyer acting as Bryan; an advertisement for toilet preparations in which Margaret Cox played the part of the girl who smiles from many a page; and the finale in which the seniors sang their class melodies.

The entire affair reflected great credit upon the students and the faculty. It was different from the stereotyped form of exercises which have prevailed in past years. Although her name does not appear on the program, the affair was conceived and directed by Miss Jessamine DeHaven, a member of the faculty. Much credit is due her for the splendid results obtained.

Will Meet in Greensburg.

The June Meeting of the Westmoreland County Medical Association will be held tomorrow afternoon in Greensburg.

UMBEL CHARGES MAY HURT THE CAUSE OF LEWELLYN

Sterling, Involved in Impeachment Accusations, is School Man's Strongest Backer.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—The charges filed at Harrisburg against Judge Robert E. Umbel of Uniontown by his political opponents may vitally affect the chances of C. G. Lewellyn of Brownsville for appointment as collector of internal revenue for the western district of Pennsylvania at Pittsburg. Bruce F. Sterling, Democratic chairman of Fayette County, whose name figures in the charges is backer of Lewellyn for the collectorship. While there has been a tentative agreement that Llewellyn should be appointed to the place, it is said that in view of the allegations made at Harrisburg, the effect will be to at least delay indefinitely the naming of Lewellyn.

The contest for the five important federal positions at Pittsburg, United States attorney, marshal, collector of internal revenue, surveyor of customs and appraiser of customs, is so keen that to prevent ruinous dissensions in the ranks of the reorganized Democracy in the western end of the state a new slate may be made with the present aspirants eliminated.

Candidates who visited Washington in the interest of patronage are expected to descend on National Committeeman Mitchell Palmer when he goes to Pittsburg to attend the farewell dinner to State Chairman George W. Guthrie, before he sails for Japan as American ambassador.

That is the intention of the state leaders to clear up the patronage situation hurriedly is apparent. To date 52 presidential postmasters, principally in the western counties, have been named within the past three weeks and the names of 100 others for offices where the commissions of the Republican incumbents have expired are before Postmaster General Burleson for transmission to the President.

RECEIPTS SHOW GAINS

May Business at Postoffice Goes Ahead of Last Year.

According to the monthly report prepared by Postmaster A. E. Kurtz compiled this morning, the receipts of the Connellsville office for the month of May were $464.14 in excess of those for the like period last year. The total receipts were $3,120.44 and were derived as follows: From the sale of stamped paper and stamps, $3,-055.25; from newspaper postage, $56.49; box rentals, $5.70.

The civil service examination for postoffice clerks and carriers will be held here on June 14. Candidates for positions must range in age from 18 to 45 years, and married women will not be permitted to participate in the examination. This prohibition, however, does not apply to women who are divorced or to those separted from their husband and support themselves. Applicants must be physically sound, and male applicants not less than five feet four inches in height.

ON HOME STRETCH

Missing Word Seekers Enter the Last Lap of Exciting Contest.

The missing word seekers are entering the last lap today. This is the last chance for the contestants. Eleven missing words have been sought and today the twelfth appears. As soon as possible after these returns are compiled the winners of the prizes will be announced.

This week the contest editor has picked a hard word. He declares that it will take the most careful search to locate the word that has been omitted from some advertisement. The only clue he gives is that the word begins with "C" and ends with "T." The result of the contest may hinge upon this one elusive word.

Last week the missing word was "Spring." It was omitted from between the words "your" and "suit," in the advertisement of Dave Cohen, the tailor.

WANT AUTO FOR COPS.

Bloodhounds Also Proposed as Part of State Police Equipment.

United Press Telegram.

GREENSBURG, June 2.—A collection is being taken up here today for the purchase of an automobile and bloodhounds for the state constabulary.

Since the murder of Grace Johnston the 13-year-old school girl, it has been pointed out that the murderer might have been arrested had the officials blood hounds to place on the trail soon after the murder was discovered.

PORTER S. NEWMYER, LEADING CITIZEN, IS VICTIM OF APOPLEXY

County's Oldest Lawyer Dies Suddenly in Nephew's Home.

PLANNED TRIP TO OLD HOME

Mr. Newmyer was Born in Tyrone Township, Studied Law Under W. H. Playford and was Admitted to Bar in 1871; Was an Active Citizen.

Porter Strickler Newmyer, oldest member of the Fayette County bar, and for years a resident of Connellsville, died suddenly yesterday morning at the home of his nephew, Burt Newmyer, at Vanderbilt. He was stricken with an attack of apoplexy and died before Dr. J. H. Hazlett and Dr. H. J. Bell arrived.

Mr. Newmyer went to Vanderbilt yesterday morning intending to visit the old Newmyer homestead near Dawson in company with his nephew. Just before starting, he sat down in a chair to rest. Burt Newmyer's son, Bryan, saw his great-uncle suddenly collapse. Assistance was summoned but the stricken man was beyond human aid. The body was brought to the home here last evening, where his widow, Mrs. Mary D. Newmyer, has been seriously ill for some weeks past.

No man in Connellsville was better known than P. S. Newmyer. Ever since his admission to the bar in 1871, when he opened an office here, he had been more or less active in the city's business and civic affairs. Originally a Democrat, he took an active interest in party matters, serving on several occasions as delegate to the state conventions. He left the party in 1896. Of late years he had not been active, either in politics or the practise of his profession, though he appeared and was in active charge of a case at the March term of court this spring.

The Newmyer family is one of the oldest in the county. Peter Newmyer, the founder, came from Germany during the middle of the seventeenth century and settled near Pennsville. Porter Strickler Newmyer was the son of Joseph and Elizabeth Strickler Newmyer and was born in Tyrone township, October 8, 1847. He was graduated from the Southwestern State Normal School at California, Pa., and completed his schooling at Alliance College, Stark County, O. He left school in 1868 and studied law in the office of the late W. H. Playford at Uniontown. At the May term, 1871, he was admitted to the bar and on May 5 of that year opened an office in Connellsville.

In the days of his activity, Porter S. Newmyer was a leading citizen, enterprising, progressive and public spirited. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank in 1876 and served as a director and vice president until 1882, when he disposed of his holdings. He likewise projected and promoted the old Connellsville gas company, which furnished the first gas lighting for Connellsville, theretofore dependent upon candles and kerosene lamps. He built the first public playhouse in Connellsville. Newmyer's opera house still stands on the corner of Pittsburg and Peach streets, though no longer used as a theatre. He was at all times active in the promotion of Connellsville. He was prominent in its commercial bodies, its improvement associations and its local government. He was one of a dozen citizens who founded The Courier in 1879.

For a time Mr Newmyer was interested in the mercantile business, being a member of the firm of Hood Brothers & Co. He was for many years an active practitioner in his profession of law, but of late years he took but few cases. For a time he was a trustee of Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va. He was a member of the Christian Church.

On April 10, 1873, Mr. Newmyer married Miss Mary A. Davidson, daughter of Thomas R. and Isabella Davidson. Mrs. Newmyer survives him. They had two children, Mrs. Fenton T. Evans and Attorney Thomas D. Newmyer of Pittsburg.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Newmyer residence on South Pittsburg street. Rev. J. P. Allison and Rev. R. C. Wolf will officiate. Interment will be in private in Hill Grove cemetery.

The Fayette County Bar Association met at Uniontown today for the purpose of making arrangements for its part in the funeral. Attorneys J. Kirk Ronner, S. R. Goldsmith and H. George May were named on the committee of arrangements and flowers; Attorneys E. C. Higbee, M. M. Cochran and D. W. McDonald on the committee of resolutions. As many members of the association as possible will attend the funeral in a body, if the family desires.

Doctor Baker is Buried.

Services were held for Dr. Hugh Baker from the home of his nephew, H. C. Tazewell, in Wilmington, Del., with interment at Wilmington. Mrs. Baker and Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Bailey arrived home this morning from Wilmington.

Leaves the Hospital.

Frank Catuti of the West Side was discharged this afternoon from the Cottage State Hospital. Charles Gordon, five years old, of Bidwell, who shot himself through the abdomen is able to walk about the hospital. No new patients were admitted over Sunday.

JUNE BRIDES

What Those Who Wish to be Happy Should Do.

Many Connellsville lads and lassies have been pierced by Cupid's arrow and there will be quite a number of weddings this month. The June bride who wishes to be happy, not merely during the honeymoon but all her life, should have a savings account. There can be no permanent happiness in the home unless the wife's saving and thrifty. Her husband's success depends largely upon her ability to save, and the best place a bride can have her savings account is in the Yough Trust Company, because that institution is not only a sound bank, paying 4%, but a faithful advisor, agent and trustee. All her life a woman can depend upon "The Yough" for helpful service in money matters. —Adv.

WILL CLOSE FOR PICNIC.

Wright-Metzler Company to Give Clerks a Holiday.

The date of the annual outing of the employes of the Connellsville and Uniontown stores of the Wright-Metzler Company will be decided at a meeting to be held this evening following the closing of the store. The management has decided to close the store at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the outing and following the usual custom a special street car will convey the picnickers to and from the park.

As heretofore the managers will join in the outing and a general good time is being anticipated. An interesting feature will be a baseball game between a picked team from the two stores.

Tons of Roots and Herbs.

Are used annually in the manufacture of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is known from ocean to ocean as the standard remedy for female ills.

For nearly forty years this famous root and herb medicine has been preeminently successful in controlling the diseases of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time. —Advertisement.

Sunday School Beats Uniontown.

In the contest between the Martha Norton Bible class of the Christian Church of Connellsville and the Ladies' Bible class of the Christian Church in Uniontown, the former class won by 98 points, 155 being present yesterday morning. The class is taught by Mrs. A. W. Bowman and the contest lasted for three months.

SIR RUFAS ISAACS IN MARCONI SCANDAL MAD SUDDEN RISE.

LONDON, June 2.—Sir Rufus Isaacs, attorney general, who was reported to have resigned because of the Marconi scandal, had a phenomenal rise to affluence and political power. The son of a London merchant and having received a college education, he shipped before the mast as a common sailor on a vessel bound for South America, but soon tired of the severity of sea life and returned to London, where he tried business as a broker, but found himself facing insolvency at the age of twenty-six.

Acting on the advice of his future wife, Miss Alice Cohen, he took up the study of law and in 1887 was admitted to the bar in London. He specialized in bankruptcy laws and matters requiring a knowledge of financial affairs, and his gift for figures soon gained him prominence as an expert in such cases.

In 1904 Rufus Isaacs entered politics and was elected member of parliament. In 1912 he entered the Asquith cabinet, and it will be remembered that in that year he also conducted the famous inquiry into the Titanic disaster.

STUDENTS MAKE RECORD

Not Single Absentee From Rehearsals of Class Play.

The final dress rehearsal for the senior class play at the Colonial Theatre this evening was held today. The rehearsal as well as the one last Saturday was in costume. The class has made a record in its preparation for the play. Those who take part were selected earlier in the year than usual. Each was chosen on account of his peculiar fitness for the part and before entering upon the work each pupil was told just what sacrifices must be made and advised not to accept the part unless he was willing to make all the necessary efforts to properly prepare himself for the play.

As a result the rehearsals that have been going on for nearly two months to a greater or less extent have been unique in that no member of the cast has been absent from a single rehearsal.

The play abounds in fun from beginning to end. Many of the situations are ridiculous and the way in which different ones are extricated from the different predicaments will keep the audience interested.

BEGIN PEONAGE PROBE.

Senate Committee May Not Visit West Virginia for Two Weeks.

United Press Telegram.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—Mapping out their plan of campaign for the investigation of the alleged peonage system in West Virginia, the probe committee appointed under the Kern resolution, met this morning. Senator Swanson predicted that the committee will be unable to visit the coal district of West Virginia before two weeks, but Senators Borah and Martine are in favor of securing first-hand information at once.

For the next few days the activity of the committee will be restricted to the studying of law on the subject, and to the reviewing of the batch of affidavits secured by Senator Kern.

A Fallacy Dispelled.

Many of the deleterious effects ascribed to coffee, chiefly by those who have "an axe to grind," have been proved to be incorrect by experiments carried out by Professor H. L. Hollingsworth of Columbia University, New York City. His recent experiments go to prove that high class coffee is not injurious. This is welcome news to those who enjoy good coffee. Splendid results have been obtained with "BREAKFAST CHEER" coffee. High grade coffee produces a delicious, creamy beverage, refreshing and free from impurities which alone are responsible for unfavorable effects. You can drink "BREAKFAST CHEER" coffee with assurance and healthy enjoyment. Be sure to order some of this coffee today.—Adv.

Soft and effective was the blouse illustrated here. The material used was ivory white crepe de chine, trimmed with ecru guipure lace and narrow bands of black ribbon velvet with groups of fancy buttons sewed on them. This design might also be carried out in satin charmeuse with vest and bands of muslin embroidery. The cuffs with the black velvet bands show off a pretty hand to advantage.

EVANGELIST DAVIS SPEAKS

Addresses a Large Audience Under Auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

"The Price of Power," was the subject of an interesting sermon delivered by Rev. John A. Davis of Binghamton, N. Y., under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon at the Colonial Theatre. The evangelist is well known in Connellsville, having conducted a religious campaign here two years ago.

The speaker pointed out that in every walk of life men desire power in their special line of endeavor. Many attain their end in different ways, but the only manner in which it can be secured in the Christian life is through faith in God and His teachings.

Mr. Davis in closing spoke of excellent work being done by Secretary E. T. Baer of the Y. M. C. A., and told of the achievements of Mr. Baer in other communities where he resided before coming to Connellsville.

"The Witching Food"

Has Just Come Out

For ten years we have waited to make this announcement—of bubbles puffed from corn.

It has taken ten years to learn how to produce them. Now the new food is ready.

It is the inner part of white corn—granulated, cooked and toasted—made into pellets and puffed.

The result is airy globules—thin and flaky—chocolate-colored, almond-flavored.

It is so insidious—so irresistible—that users call it "The Witching Food."

We call it Corn Puffs.

It will soon be the talk of the city. Please try it while it's new.

No More Constipation

It's Me for Olive Tablets!

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and Calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated tablets.

They cause the bowels and liver to act normal. They never force them to unnatural action.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are so easy to take that children do not regard them as "medicine" at all.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Olive Tablets at bedtime. They're perfectly harmless.

Thousands take one every night just to keep right. Try them.

"Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own." 10c and 25c per box

Do You Need Assistance

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER?

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall or any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

DEMOCRATIC POLITICS.

The ambitions of accidental leadership are breeding among the Pennsylvania Democrats faster than flies in summer time, and the impression seems to be firmly fixed in certain official circles that there has been no change in the old ironical rule, "Them that has gits."

The Honorable A. Mitchell Palmer, B. S., has been prominently mentioned by the Honorable Warren Worth Bailey, editor and statesman, as the coming Democratic candidate for Governor, but the occupant of the center seat on the Triumviral throne now indicates that he is going to be the next Senator from Pennsylvania, and that the Cambria county free born Free Trader and Free Silverite may have the Governorship for himself.

Editor Bailey is coming out strong in politics, thus justifying the position we have always taken, that good editors make the best statesmen. It seems that it was for Bailey that William Henry Berry was given the Collectorship of Philadelphia and George W. Guthrie was sent to far Japan as an ambassador. In these political calculations, however, the third member of the Palmer-Guthrie-McCormick combine is unaccounted for. It is generally conceded that Vance McCormick is not in politics wholly for amusement. Just where he comes in is not apparent, but he will probably either come in, or break out, pretty soon.

In the meantime comes a message from Washington to the effect that the Umbel impeachment proceedings at Harrisburg may have a paralyzing effect upon the political pull of Chairman Bruce Foster Sterling, B. S., notwithstanding the suspicion that the Harrisburg proceedings relate more directly to present politics than to past events.

It remains to be seen, however, whether the Barefoot Boy degree will be lightly set aside, and recent and heroic service at Harrisburg and Baltimore wholly ignored.

A POLITICAL ADVERTISER.

The indomitable not to say irrepressible Colonel Roosevelt has won his libel suit against the Michigan editor, who in a manner most coarse and brutal, and in type very black, asserted that the Plumed Knight of Armageddon "got drunk."

It is true that the editor made no defense to the suit after the Colonel had proved by a number of his friends that they had never seen him under the influence of stimulants, and that the Colonel magnanimously agreed to a verdict for nominal damages and paid his share of the costs; but the question of the Colonel's temperate habits, so far as drinking is concerned, may be considered as having been well established. It might be added that they were never seriously questioned, despite this intemperate utterance of a backwoods paper during a superheated political campaign.

The whole proceeding is a striking illustration of the fact that the ready Roosevelt has come to a proper realization of the value of advertising. Advertising is something T. R. has never failed to appreciate, but his recent connection with magazine work has taught him, not only how to profit by it, but also how to create it. The libel suit against the Michigan editor enabled him to get back again into the limelight; to demonstrate that he is a temperate man without being a temperance crank; to show that he is a proper citizen without being a prude.

There is no Roosevelt but Roosevelt, and Politics is his Profit.

WHAT PASSES FOR FLATTERY.

The Connellsville News quotes the Somerset Democrat as saying: "We have been employed on several daily papers and we were managing editor for two years of a daily considerably better than the Connellsville Courier, and within the past month we have turned down an offer from the Connellsville News."

The News adds with considerable gratification: "On this latter point Editor Cleaver naturally thrills with pride that an offer to work on The News had been extended him. And we modestly but confidently inquire, Can you blame him?"

Perhaps we cannot blame the Somerset editor for having the thrills, but it is evident that he is much too impressionable. If an offer from The News affected him so seriously, the proffer of a position on a first-class paper like The Courier might prove fatal.

But all this is unimportant compared with the mystery that remains unexplained, namely, What position was offered to Editor Cleaver?

Editor Cleaver indicates quite clearly that he was offered the position of managing editor of The News, and the inference is plain that he did not regard this as being a desirable offer. He evidently thinks he is a bigger man in his present position as editor of a Democratic weekly than he would be as editor of the weekly Connellsville News.

If there is any flattery to our contemporary in making these facts public, we desire to say that, so far as we are concerned, it is quite welcome.

In the history of Connellsville's growth and progress for the past twoscore years, the name of Porter Strickler Newmyer is justly prominent. Naturally forceful and energetic, his mind and hands were always busy. During the days of his activities much of the advancement of the community was due to his initiative, and all of it had his loyal support. The weaknesses he may have had are not worth remembering in the larger achievements of his career.

Commencement season is in full swing.

If the bill permitting juries to stipulate whether convicted murderers shall be hanged or imprisoned for life becomes a law there will be more convictions in the first degree but fewer hangings than ever. Upon the whole, however, the cause of justice will be conserved, if the pardoning powers are not too liberal.

The Harvester Trust is to be plowed up again.

A contemporary wants to know what President Wilson knows of the lobby. We should say he knows more than most men. He has come in closer contact with it. The President is something of a button-holer himself.

The good old summer time is still shy.

The breach in the Republican party cannot be healed by a handful of leaders in a few days or a few weeks, but it can and will be healed by time and the undoubted sentiment of the rank and file of the party.

Where did Professor Redfield get his certificate to teach the science of industrial efficiency?

Windber has a Brighten-up-Club which offers prizes for the best kept premises in the town. The club members all chip together to buy the prizes and then struggle with each other to win them in the good cause. Windber promises in time to be a bright town.

The Democratic probers expect to spend most of the summer fishing.

The locomotive firemen and engineers had better get the consent of the administrators of the Sherman law before they make their proposed merger. In these uplift times, combination customarily spells crime.

The ruins seem to pursue the graduating class of the Connellsville public schools.

The Governor of New Hampshire ordered the Democratic Legislature to go home for a few days. This is a good precedent for Governor Tener.

It seems that the Insidious Lobby denounced by President Wilson is not confined to those who are pleading for protective Tariff duties, but includes some who are furnishing all manner of arguments in favor of Free Trade in certain lines. Why should the Pot call the Kettle black?

A hot spell might help the Legislature to adjourn.

Some of the railroads are conserving their scrap resources by cutting up old rails and using the unworn parts as long as they have sufficient length to extend over the spiking spots.

The lawyer who makes his own will seems to be as big a fool as the lawyer who pleads his own cause.

Judge Gary believes the United States Steel Corporation has set a good example in the business world. While his testimony is open to the criticism of him, most honest and intelligent observers will agree that the corporation has set a number of good examples to the men who make up the business world.

The grape juice habit is becoming quite Democratic.

Senator Penrose has declared in favor of the Senatorial primary and is making his fight for reelection upon that declaration. Furthermore, it looks as if he was going to press the fighting from start to finish, and beat Reformer Flinn at his own game.

Editor Newett admits that he didn't know it as well as he thought he knew it.

The little editor of the Connellsville News is respectfully informed that when the aged editor of the Connellsville Courier thinks it necessary to call the Uniontown Herald or any other paper a liar he needs no assistance.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON

The Famous Prose Poet

Untimely Questions

"THE evening paper says the home team got a string of goose eggs and the players were greatly disgusted," remarked Mrs. Jamesworthy, "and I don't understand that at all. I should think they'd be glad to get so many goose eggs, considering the high cost of living. Of course boss' eggs would be better for general purposes, but people shouldn't look a gift horse in the mouth. I don't see why there should be such a prejudice against goose eggs. I wish you'd explain it to me."

"Of course you do," said Jamesworthy. "Just as sure as I pick up the evening paper and become interested in the stock reports, you begin asking me to explain something. You want me to tell you the difference between an equilateral triangle and a bobtail flush, or you want information as to whether congress has reduced the tariff on initiatives and referendums. I don't see what you did when you were going to school, Mrs. Jamesworthy. The questions you ask indicate that your education was sadly neglected."

"That's just like a man," complained Mrs. Jamesworthy. "You ridicule me for being ignorant, and when I ask you for information you won't give it to me."

"I am not the 'Answers to Correspondents' department of a family newspaper, Mrs. Jamesworthy. I am just a weary, toilworn husband trying in my feeble way to sidestep the poorhouse. If you thought when you married me that you were getting an encyclopedia in twelve volumes with colored maps and a copious glossary, you got left. In which case we both were fooled, for I had the idea when you dragged me to the altar, in spite of my screams, that I was marrying a woman of normal intelligence. You had the blue prints showing that you had graduated from the high school, and yet I soon found that your ignorance was one vast shoreless sea.

"I'd be glad to answer your questions, and shed some light into the Stygian gloom of your intellect, however, if you'd approach me at proper times, but you never do. There is a time to preach and a time to dance, Mrs. Jamesworthy, and also a time to ask questions. If I happen to be immersed in a good novel, and fairly seething with curiosity as to whether the heroine is going to be bamboozled by the villain after all, you are pretty sure to come to me in your ingenious way and ask me to explain the difference between Redfield's whiskers and the conservation of our resources.

"Do you suppose that any sane man wants to break off in the middle of the umpty-steenth chapter of a dick-nailing good novel to discuss such a question? And all your questions are of a complex and baffling character, they are questions which would keep an able bodied man busy explaining for three weeks.

"When I come home from the clanging mart so weary and heartsick that I want to sit alone and think of tombs and epitaphs and dead men's bones, you are pretty sure to come along with your winning smile and ask me whether Alaska is governed by a king or a board of regents and if I don't immediately reel off the history of that important commonwealth you say I am a heartless wretch and you wish you had never left your father's roofree to marry me.

"I have $4.80 invested in an artificial ice plant in this town, and today I have heard disturbing rumors to the effect that the bottom has fallen out of the ice market, and when I take up the evening paper, with sweat bedewed brow and palpitating heart, to see whether I have been ruined by the machinations of the barons in Wall street, you ask me to explain why the baseball players should be discouraged when they harvest a crop of goose eggs. It is too much, Mrs. Jamesworthy. There are limits even to my iron endurance. If you will tell me where you hid my hat, I'll go down to the club, where a man may brood over his misfortunes in peace and quiet."

The Almighty Dollar

With a Hole in It.

We all like to think that our own dollar is sound and worth 100 cents. If some one tries to pass us a dollar with a hole in it, or one plugged with lead, we make an emphatic protest.

And yet some of us go along, day by day, letting each of our dollars buy us an average of about 70c apiece.

All of which comes from the unthrifty American habit of careless spending; or, in other words, buying things in a hurry without thought and consideration.

In a new and bountiful country like ours it is a natural result of too much prosperity.

There is, however, a growing class of people who realize that it pays well to think as they buy. To all such we recommend the advertising pages of THE COURIER which offer reliable information and suggestion to intending purchasers.

NEWS OF A DAY IN SCOTTDALE.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, June 2.—The Knights of Pythias gathered at the First Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday morning, where a special sermon was preached to the order by the pastor, Rev. H. S. Piper. There was a large delegation that filled the front of the auditorium. A huge bouquet was presented by the order to the pastor. The junior choir had charge of the music.

ADOPTS CONSTITUTION.

The Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Church adopted their new constitution on Sunday morning. It was suggested that the class be called the "John Wesley Bible Class," but the majority voted to retain the old name, "The Men's Bible Class." A departure is the appointment of a balloting committee. A week before the annual election each member is to receive a ballot with the title of the officers to be elected. They then write in the names of the ones they believe should fill the offices. These ballots are handed to the balloting committee and they choose the three high numbers of votes n each officer and these become the nominees, voted on at the election, the highest one being elected.

TAKEN ILL.

Rev. H. W. Millen, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, was taken ill on Sunday, and could not preach at the evening services.

VISITING HERE.

Miss Mabel Engle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. O. C. Engle, former residents and now of Aliquippa, is visiting friends in Scottdale for a few days.

AT COMMENCEMENT.

Miss Elsie Muir, a teacher in the high school, and her sister, Miss Florence Muir, a music teacher, are at Frederick, Md, attending the commencement of the Woman's College, the former having graduated from the classical and the latter from the musical course.

IN UNIONTOWN.

Mrs. Thomas C. Eicher spent Memorial Day in Uniontown visiting relatives and friends.

AT LECTURE.

A number of Scottdale people went to Connellsville on Sunday to hear Evangelist John A. Davis in the afternoon. Mr. Davis lectures tonight at the Scottdale Methodist Episcopal Church at 8.15.

INJURED BY AUTO.

Frederick Jarrett, while cranking up their auto, was struck by the cranking handle, which caught him in the palm of the hand and thumb, causing a severe injury, that necessitated the use of a sling to hold the arm.

MRS. BLACK DEAD.

Mrs. Sarah Black, widow of the late Alexander Black, who was for years a merchant tailor of Scottdale, died at her home in Johnstown from cancer, on Saturday. She leaves three brothers, Samuel Pool, of Johnstown, with whom she made her home; Archibald Poole, of Dunbar, and David Poole of Colorado. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. J. H. Poole, went over to Johnstown last week and was joined by her husband today.

NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Barnhart of Uniontown spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Barnhart and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Millen.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

MOUNT PLEASANT, June 2.—On Saturday evening Arthur Page, who has the right for Dollarway paving in Fayette and Westmoreland Counties, had exhibited at the Vic Theatre here a reel of motion pictures, showing how to evacuate, and make Dollarway paving. It also showed some very pretty streets where it had been used and showed where trucking was being done on them. James Shields, road engineer of Westmoreland County, the different members of council from this place and Burgess A. T. Collins were present at the exhibition.

Elizabeth Carnock, one year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carnock of Parkttown, was buried in the Mount Pleasant cemetery yesterday afternoon.

A very thrilling ride was taken by William Kellar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kellar yesterday morning. William had taken a horse and buggy from Evans' livery stable to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Myers' home on West Main street. William thought to get a ride back to the stable and sat on behind the buggy. One of his feet became tangled in the wheel, and as it made four revolutions so did William. The fifth time when the wheel was turning and William was at the top, the horse gave a start, throwing him in front of the wheels, the buggy running over his body. For a while he lost consciousness and outside of that, some scratches on his face and a sore head are all he has to remember the ride.

The Moorewood baseball nine defeated the East McKeesport team on Saturday afternoon by a score of four to one.

Mrs. Cedric Spence gave a dinner at her Main street home on Saturday evening to announce the marriage of her sister-in-law, Virgie Spence, to Wallace McCombs of Scottdale, the marriage having taken place at the Presbyterian parsonage, Wilkinsburg, on Saturday, May 17, Rev. Charles E. Sanke, officiating. Those present were Misses Elizabeth Braddock, Margaret Hurst, Mamye Myers, Marguerite Zundell, Ina Christner, Charlotte Page and Mrs. Donald Keister and Nita Husband of this place and Miss Florence Hurst of Scottdale. The colors were pink and white, pink roses being used as a centerpiece. The favors were little hearts filled with rice. The announcement was made by having a little card in the rice with the one word on each card and when they read them the announcement was complete. The announcement came as a surprise to her friends. She was a member of the high school class of '10 and was very popular among the younger set. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Spence.

The Demander restaurant, situated in the Simpson block that is being torn down by Smith Shaw so that the Kobacker building may be begun, will be moved on Wednesday to the Mullin block, next door to Goldstone's store.

DR. HALE IN MEXICO SEEKING FACTS FOR PRESIDENT WILSON.

MEXICO CITY, June 2.—Dr. William Buyard Hale is here on behalf of President Wilson to make a careful study of the Mexican situation in all its aspects and also to inform the President as nearly as can be ascertained the actual feeling of Mexicans and Americans toward Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson and what share if any the ambassador had in the overthrow of the Madero administration.

Probably he will remain here three weeks and then will try to go north to get in communication with Carranza, the leader of the northern insurgents, in order that he may provide Wilson with first hand information as to the objects of the Carranzistas—who call themselves constitutionalists and say they are fighting the real rebellion—their strength and their chances of overthrowing Huerta. During the Presidential campaign in the United States Doctor Hale wrote a series of articles on Woodrow Wilson for the World's Work, the editor of which, Mr. Walter Hines Page, is now ambassador to the court of St. James.

Mrs. J. Z. Lynn.

J. M. Stauffer was over his line today.

MISSION CLOSES

Hundred Men Join Holy Name Society at Leisenring Church.

A very interesting ceremony took place in St. Vincent de Paul Church, Leisenring, on Saturday evening when 100 men were received into the Holy Name Society. After a sermon on the reverence due to the holy name the newly enlisted members gave their promise to abstain from all profanity and obscene language and to use their influence to procure from others a greater respect for the sacred name.

Yesterday morning at the 10:30 Mass Rev. Gabriel Scheer preached an eloquent and practical sermon on the duties of parents to their children.

The largest congregation of the mission was in attendance last evening when the missionary exercises came to a close. The altars were beautifully decorated with vines and flowers and a special musical programe was provided. Rev. William Curtin preached a very consoling and hope-inspiring sermon on "Heaven." At the conclusion all present stood up and renewed their baptismal vows, promising henceforth to renounce the devil and all his works and pomps.

Father Curtin finally commented upon the extraordinary display of religious fervor shown in the regular attendance of the people during the week in spite of unfavorable weather conditions. He also took occasion to thank the press of Connellsville for its kindly notices of the mission, which were the means of bringing many visitors to Leisenring. The exercises were brought to a close with solemn benediction of the blessed sacrament. Father Scheer was celebrant. He was assisted by Rev. Charles Sullivan of Dawson and Rev. William Merz of Connellsville.

SUMMER TOURS

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Issues Attractive Booklet.

"Summer Tours" is the title of a handsomely illustrated excursion book just issued by the passenger department of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The book is one of the most elaborate publications of its kind issued by eastern railroads, containing over 200 pages of information relative to fares and routes, as well as descriptive literature of various summer resorts on its own, and connecting lines as well, with a number of excellent photographs depicting the beauties of mountains, seashore and lakes.

The book is intended for complimentary distribution and may be secured either through the tourist department of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Baltimore, or upon application to ticket agents, east of the Ohio river.

MEYERSDALE.

MEYERSDALE, June 2.—Yesterday details composed of members of M. C. Lowry Post No. 214, Grand Army of the Republic, visited the several cemeteries in Greenville, Larimer, Northampton and Summit township and decorated the graves of the old soldiers buried therein. At Kolm the same day a memorial service was held and an address delivered by Rev. Edgar S. Hassler, pastor of St. Paul's Reformed Church.

Mrs. H. F. Albright and daughter of Connellsville, returned home yesterday after spending several days with relatives and friends at this place.

Miss Kit Dougherty, accompanied by her niece, Miss Nell Dougherty, who had been visiting friends here since Memorial Day, returned yesterday to their home in Connellsville.

W. P. Cochran, a mine foreman, residing at Confluence, spent Saturday and yesterday with friends here and at Salisbury, his former home.

M. J. Kerrigan of Connellsville, was the guest of friends here and at Sand Patch the past several days.

John D. Locke, a prominent Rockwood merchant, was a visitor in Meyersdale yesterday.

Mrs. D. W. Livengood and two children of Latrobe, arrived here Saturday evening to spend several days visiting the former's grandfather, Samuel J. Miller of Salisbury street, and her aunts, the Misses Eliza and Mary Miller.

W. A. Younkin after spending several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Younkin of the South Side, returned yesterday to Williams, Pa., where he is store manager for the Savage Fire Brick Company.

J. M. Muirland of Dawson, deputy collector of internal revenue, after spending the past several days here upon business pertaining to his position, left yesterday for Connellsville.

C. E. Crowe, who has for some time been stationed as storekeeper and gauger at the Johnston distillery at Berkley, Pa., was Saturday transferred to the Buhl & Gatesman distillery, located on Keystone street, this place.

Ray Imhoff left on No. 5 last evening for Pittsburg, where he has accepted a position in the Westinghouse works. He will stay with his brother, the Rev. Burton Imhoff, pastor of the Hazelwood Christian Church.

The Gurley building on Centre street is being remodeled for moving picture purposes, and will contain the Bijou Theatre, which will be thrown open to the public about the 20th inst. It is said that talking pictures will be shown in connection with the usual variety. This will make the third "movie" enterprise for Meyersdale, the Summer Garden and the Rex Theatres, each reported as doing a lucrative business.

A number of our citizens have left recently for Paw Paw, W. Va., where they have secured employment with H. S. Kerbaugh, Inc., who has long-term contracts for the Baltimore & Ohio improvements at that point. These people were employed with the Kerbaugh concern at Sand Patch during the construction of the new double track tunnel.

The members of Friendship Lodge, No. 76, Loyal Order of Moose, of this place, have announced a monster picnic and field meet to be held at Riverside Park on the Fourth of July. Bands and lodges will be present from Frostburg, Cumberland and other points, and a special train will be run from Cumberland over the Western Maryland railroad.

"GO IN DEBT if you want to get rich. There is no incentive to save equalling the compulsion to save that follows a prudently-made debt.

"Don't go in debt on general expenses—that will foster ruin. Don't buy a suit unless you can pay for it—or an automobile or anything of costly upkeep.

"But buy a house—prudently; or a farm—with more deliberation; or a piano, or some real property. And you'll save—and soon own it.

"Our records show hundreds of piano owners who never could have owned an instrument on a cash basis, and all the vast experience of selling pianos we have known of no subsequent hardship; nor have we been asked for relief from the bargain, except in two or three cases. Family bereavement—the loss of the breadwinner—has, in a few cases, changed plans. And we have helped to make the change easy."

DANNY'S OWN STORY

By DON MARQUIS

Copyright, 1912, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

PROLOGUE.

"Stand up, Danny, and take your place 'longside of Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer and Pluppy Shute and the other real boys we've read about." That's what you feel like saying when you read this story of Danny. He is Huck Finn over again, with modern improvements, and his daddy, who has written Danny's own story in Danny's own words, gets a place at the side of Mark Twain. Besides Danny, there are some real live people in this story—enough of them to make good reading matter for half a dozen books. No one can tell you how good "Danny's Own Story" is. You have to read it for yourself to get the delicious flavor of the humor and pathos and tragedy, the essence of life, that is soaked into every page.

CHAPTER I.

In the Cistern.

HOW I come not to have a last name is a question that has always had more or less aggervation mixed up with it. I might of had one jest as well as not if Old Hank Walters hadn't been so allfired, infernal bullheaded about things in general, and his wife Elmira a blame sight worse, and both of 'em ready to row at a minute's notice and stick to it forevermore.

Hank, he was considerable of a lusher. One Saturday night, when he come home from the village in his usual fix, he stumbled over a basket that was setting on his front steps. Then he got up and drawed back his foot unsteady to kick it plump into kingdom come. Jest then he hearn Elmira opening the door behind him, and he turned his head sudden. But the kick was already started into the air, and when he turns he can't stop it. And so Hank gets twisted and falls down and steps on himself. That basket lets out a yowl.

"It's kittens," says Hank, still setting down and staring at that there basket. All of which, you understand, I am a-telling you from hearsay, as the lawyers always asts you in court.

Elmira, she sings out:

"Kittens, nothing! It's a baby!"

And she opens the basket and looks in and it was me.

"Hannerey Walters," she says, picking me up and shaking me at him like I was a crime—"Hannerey Walters, where did you get this here baby?" She always calls him Hannerey when she is getting ready to give him fits.

Hank, he scratches his head, for he's kind o' confuddled, and thinks mebby he really has brought this basket with him. He tries to think of all the places he has been that night. But he can't think of any place but Bill Nolan's saloon. So he says:

"Elmira, honest, I ain't had but one drink all day." And then he kind o' rouses up a little bit and says:

"That a baby you got there, Elmira?" And then he says, dignified, "So fur as that's consarned, Elmira, where did you get that there baby?"

She looks at him, and she sees he don't really know where I come from. Old Hank mostly was truthful when liekered up, for that matter, and she knowed it, fur he couldn't think up no lies excepting a general denial when intoxicated up to the gills.

Elmira looks into the basket. They was one of them long rubber tubes stringing out of a bottle that was in it, and I had been sucking that bottle when interrupted. And they wasn't nothing else in that basket but a big thick shawl which had been wrapped all around me, and Elmira often wore it to meeting afterward. She goes inside and she looks at the bottle and me by the light, and Old Hank, he comes stumbling in afterward and sets down in a chair and waits to get Hail Columbia for coming home in that shape, so's he can row back agin, like they done every Saturday night.

Blowed in the glass of the bottle was the name, "Daniel, Dunne and Company." Anybody but them two old ignoramuses could of told right off that that didn't have nothing to do with me, but was jest the company that made them kind of bottles. But she reads it out loud three or four times, and then she says:

"His name is Daniel Dunne," she says.

"And Company," says Hank, feeling right quarrelsome.

"Company ain't no name," says she.

"Why hain't it, I'd like to know?" says Hank. "I knowed a man onct whose name was Farmer, and if a farmer's a name why ain't company a name too?"

"His name is Daniel Dunne," says Elmira, quietlike, but not dodging a row, neither.

"And Company," says Hank getting on to his feet, like he always done when he seen trouble coming. When Old Hank was full of licker he knowed jest the ways to aggervate her the worst.

She might of banged him one the same as usual and got her own eye blacked also, the same as usual, but jest then I lets out another big yowl, and she gives me some milk.

I guess the only reason they ever kep' me at first was so they could quarrel about my name. They'd lived together a good many years and quarreled about everything else under the sun and was running out of subjects. A new subject kind o' brickened things up fur awhile.

But finally they went too far with it one time. I was about two years old then, and he was still calling me Company and her calling me Dunne. This time he hits her a lick that lays her out and likes to kill her, and it gets him scared. But she gets around agin after awhile, and they both see it has went too fur that time, and so they makes up.

"Elmira, I give in," says Hank. "His name is Dunne."

"No," says she tender like. "You was right, Hank. His name is Company." So they pretty near got into another row over that. But they finally made it up between 'em I didn't have no last name, and they'd jest call me Danny, which they both done faithful ever after, as agreed.

Old Hank, he was a blacksmith, and he used to lam me considerable, him and his wife not having any kids of their own to lick. He lammed me when he was drunk, and he whaled me when he was sober. I never helt it up agin him much neither, not fur a good many years, because he got me used to it young, and I hadn't never knowed nothing else. Hank's wife, Elmira, she used to lick him jest about as often as he licked her and boss him jest as much. So he fell back on me. A man has jest naturally got to have something to cuss around and beat so's to keep himself from finding out he don't amount to nothing. Leastways most men is like that. And Hank, he didn't amount to much, and he kind o' knowed it way down deep in his inmost gizzards, and it were a comfort to him to have me around.

But they was one thing he never set no store by, and I got along now to where I hold that up agin him more'n all the lickings he ever done. That was book learning. He never had none himself, and he was set agin it, and he never made me get none, and if I'd ever asted him for any he'd of whaled me fur that. Hank's wife, Elmira, had married beneath her, and everybody in our town had come to see it and used to sympathize with her about it when Hank wasn't around. She'd tell 'em yes, it was so. Back in Elmira, N. Y., from where her father and mother come to our part of Illinoise in the early days, her father had kep' a hotel, and they was stylish kind o' folks. When she was born her mother was homesick fur all that style and fur York state ways, and so she named her Elmira.

But when she married Hank he had considerable land. His father had left it to him, but it was all swamp land, and so Hank's father, he hunted more'n he farmed, and Hank and his brothers done the same when he was a boy. But Hank, he learned a little blacksmithing when he was growing up, 'cause he liked to tinker around and to show how stout he was. Then when he married Elmira Appleton he had to go to work practicing that perfession reg'lar, because he never learnt nothing about farming. He'd sell fifteen or twenty acres every now and then, and they'd be high times till he'd spent it up, and mebby Elmira would get some new clothes.

But when I was found on the doorstep the land was all gone and Hank was practicing reg'lar, when not busy cussing out the fellers that had bought the land. Fur some smart fellers had come along and bought up all that swamp land and dreened it, and now it was worth seventy or eighty dollars an acre. Hank, he figgered some one had cheated him. Which the Walterses could of dreened theirn, too, only they'd rather hunt ducks and have fish frys than to dig ditches. All of which I hearn Elmira talking over with the neighbors more'n once when I was growing up, and they all says, "How sad it is you have come to this, Elmira!" And then she'd kind o' spunk up and say, thanks to glory, she'd kep' her pride.

Well, they was worse places to live in than that there little town, even if they wasn't no railroad within eight miles and only 300 soles in the hull copperation. Which Hank's shop and our house set in the edge of the woods just outside the copperation line, so's the city marshal didn't have no authority to arrest him after he crossed it.

They was one thing in that house I always admired when I was a kid. And that was a big cistern. Most people has their cisterns outside their house, and they is a tin pipe takes all the rain water off the roof and scoots it into them. Ourn would of been the same, but our cistern was right in under our kitchen floor, and they was a trap door with leather hinges opened into it right by the kitchen stove. But that wasn't why I was so proud of it. It was because that cistern was jest plumb full of fish—bullheads and red horse and sunfish and other kinds.

Hank's father had built that cistern. And one time he brung home some live fish in a bucket and dumped 'em in there. And they growed. And they multiplied in there and refurnished the earth. So that cistern had got to be a family custom, which was kep' up in that family for a habit. It was a great comfort to Hank, fur all them Walterses was great fish eaters, though it never went to brains. We fed 'em now and then, and throwed back in the little ones till they was growed, and kep' the dead ones picked out soon's we smelled anything wrong, and it never hurt the water none, and when I was a kid I wouldn't of took anything fur living in a house like that.

Once, when I was a kid about six years old, Hank come home from the barroom. He got to chasing Elmira's cat 'cause he says it was making faces at him. The cistern door was open, and Hank fell in. Elmira was over to town, and I was scared. She had always told me not to fool around there none when I was a little kid, fur if I fell in there I'd be a corpse quicker'n scatt.

So when Hank fell in and I hearn him splash, being only a little feller and awful scared because Elmira had always made it so strong, I hadn't no sort of unbelief but what Hank was a corpse already. So I slams the trap door shut over that there cistern without looking in, fur I hearn Hank flopping around down in there. I hadn't never hearn a corpse flop before and didn't know but what it might be somehow injurious to me, and I wasn't going to take no chances.

So I went out and played in the front yard and waited fur Elmira. But I couldn't seem to get my mind settled on playing. I was a horse nor nothing. I kep' thinking mebby Hank's corpse is going to come flopping out of that cistern and whale me some unusual way. I hadn't never been licked by a corpse and didn't rightly know jest what one is anyhow, being young and comparitive innocent. So I sneaks back in and sets all the flatirons in the house on top of the cistern lid. I hearn some flopping and splashing and spluttering, like Hank's corpse is trying to jump up and is falling back into the water, and I hearn Hank's voice and got scareder yet. And when Elmira come along down the road she seen me by the gate a-crying, and she asts me why.

"Hank is a corpse," says I, blubbering.

"A corpse!" says Elmira, dropping her coffee, which she was carrying home from the general store and post-office. "Danny, what do you mean?"

I seen I was to blame somehow, and I wisht then I hadn't said nothing about Hank being a corpse. And I made up my mind I wouldn't say nothing more. So when she grabs holt of me and asts me ag'in what did I mean I blubbered harder, jest the way a kid will, and says nothing else. I wisht I hadn't set them flatirons in that door, fur it come to me all at oncet that even if Hank has turned into a corpse I ain't got any right to keep him in that cistern.

Jest then old Mis' Rogers, which is one of our neighbors, comes by, while Elmira is shaking me and yelling out what did I mean and how did it happen and had I saw it, and where was Hank's corpse?

And Mis' Rogers she says, "What's Danny been doing now, Elmira?" me being always up to something.

Elmira she turned around and seen her, and she gives a whoop and then hollers out, "Hank is dead!" and throws her apern over her head and sets right down in the path and boo-hoos like a baby. And I bellers louder.

Mis' Rogers, she never waited to ast nothing more. She seen she had a piece of news, and she's bound to be the first to spread it, like they is always a lot of women wants to be in them country towns. She run right acrost the road to where the Alexanderses lived. Mis' Alexander, she seen her coming and unhooked the screen door, and Mis' Rogers she hollers out before she reached the porch:

"Hank is a corpse," says I, blubbering.

"Hank Walters is dead!"

And then she went footing it up the street. They was a black plume on her bunnet which nodded the same as on a hearse, and she was into and out of seven front yards in five minutes.

Mis' Alexander, she runs acrost the street to where we was, and she kneels down and puts her arm around Elmira, which was still rocking back and forth in the path, and she says:

"How do you know he's dead, Elmira? I seen him not more'n an hour ago."

"Danny seen it all," says Elmira.

Mis' Alexander turned to me and wants to know what happened and how it happened and where it happened. But I don't want to say nothing about that cistern. So I busts out bellering fresher'n ever, and I says:

"He was drunk, and he come home drunk, and he done it then, and that's how he done it," I says.

"And you seen him?" she says. I nodded.

"Where is he?" says she and Elmira, both to oncet.

But I was scared to say nothing about that there cistern, so I jest bawled some more.

"Was it in the blacksmith shop?" says Mis' Alexander. I nodded my head agin and let it go at that.

"Is he in there now?" asts Mis' Alexander. I nodded agin. I hadn't meant to give out no untrue stories. But a kid will always tell a lie, not meaning to tell one, if you sort of invite him with questions like that and get him scared the way you're acting. Besides, I says to myself, "so long as Hank has turned into a corpse and that makes him dead, what's the difference whether he's in the blacksmith shop or not?" Fur I hadn't any plain idea, being such a little kid, that a corpse meant to be dead and wasn't sure what being dead was like, neither, except they had funerals over you then. I knowed being a corpse must be some sort of a big disadvantage from the way Elmira always says keep away from that cistern door or I'll be one. But if they was going to be a funeral in our house I'd feel kind o' important too. They didn't have 'em every day in our town, and we hadn't never had one of our own.

So Mis' Alexander, she led Elmira into the house, both a crying, and Mis' Alexander trying to comfort her, and me a tagging along behind holding on to Elmira's skirts and sniffling into them. And in a few minutes all them women Mis' Rogers has told come filing into that room, one at a time, looking sad. Only old Mis' Primrose, she was awful late getting there because she stopped to put on her bunnet she always wore to funerals with the black Paris lace on it her cousin Armiuty White had sent her from Chicago.

When they found out Hank had come home with licker in him and done it himself they was all excited, and they all crowds around and asts me how, except two as is holding on to Elmira's hands, which sets moaning in a chair. And they all asts me questions as to what I seen him do, which if they hadn't I wouldn't have told 'em the lies I did. But they egged me on to it.

Says one woman, "Danny, you seen him do it in the blacksmith shop?"

I nodded.

"But how did he get in?" sings out another woman. "The door was locked on the outside with a padlock jest now when I come by. He couldn't of killed himself in there and locked the door on the outside."

I didn't see how he could of done that myself, so I begun to bawl ag'in and said nothing at all.

"He must of crawled through that little side window," says another one. "It was open when I come by, if the door was locked. Did you see him crawl through the little side window, Danny?"

I nodded. They wasn't nothing else fur me to do.

"But you hain't tall enough to look through that there window," says another one to me. "How could you see into that shop, Danny?"

I didn't know, so I didn't say nothing at all. I jest sniffed.

"They is a store box right in under that window," says another one. "Danny must have clumb on to that store box and looked in after he seen Hank come down the road and crawl through the window. Did you scramble on to the store box and look in, Danny?"

I jest nodded ag'in.

"And what was it you seen him do? How did he kill himself?" they all asts to oncet.

I didn't know. So I jest bellers and boohoos some more. Things was getting past anything I could see the way out of.

"He might of hung himself to one of the iron rings in the jists above the forge," says another woman. "He clumb on to the forge to tie the rope to one of them rings, and he tied the other end around his neck, and then he stepped off'n the forge. Was that how he done it, Danny?"

I nodded. And then I bellered louder than ever. I knowed Hank was down in that there cistern, a corpse, and a mighty wet corpse, all this time, but they kind o' got me thinking mebby he was hanging out in the shop by the forge too. And I guessed I'd better stick to the shop story, not wanting to say nothing about that cistern no sooner'n I could help it.

Pretty soon one woman says, kind o' shivery:

"I don't want to have the job of opening the door of that blacksmith shop the first one!"

COKERS WIN TWO FROM SOUTHERN ATHLETIC CLUB

First Contest Is Hard Fought but the Second Proves a Runaway.

COKERS TAKE UPHILL CONTEST

Rally in Seventh Ties Score of the Opener Saturday and Run in Eighth Settles the Contest; Second Game Proves a Farce; Fair Crowd Out.

The Cokers took both games of Saturday's double-header from the Southern Athletic Club of Pittsburg. The first contest was somewhat listless. The visitors got away in the lead and would have beaten them but for miserable fielding; back of Darney. The Cokers took no liberties with the visiting pitcher, but they made one and two bases on the worst kind of fielding in the outer garden.

The Cokers did not put up their best game in this contest. They played listless baseball. In the second they made up for lost time as the visitors had no pitcher who could twirl and the men who tried were batted at will. The scores:

Sherwood Magee, Star Outfielder of Phillies, Playing Snappy Game

PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—Sherwood Magee, the star outfielder of the Phillies, is playing the best game of his career this season. Not alone is he walloping the ball at a great rate, but his fielding is of the sensational order. His base running is also of the best. For many years Magee has been considered one of the star outfielders and batters in the game. In the early games he did not connect with the ball very often, but during the last few weeks his big bludgeon has been very much in evidence. With "Gabby" Cravath and Magee going well the Phillies have two of the heaviest pill pounders in the National League.

SMITHFIELD

SMITHFIELD, May 31.—The weather conditons were the worst for the Memorial Day exercises herd Friday since first the day was observed in this community. On account of the rain services were held in the church and a detail sent out to the I. O. O. F. cemetery in the forenoon to decorate the graves. The Post accompanied by the Smithfield Cornet Band went to Woodbridgetown in nine autos and strewed the graves of the soldier dead in the cemetery there. Rev. W. M Ryan was to have made an address there but on account of the threatening aspect of the weather this was dispensed with. Reverend Kingsley, E. H. Roppert and R. P. Hopwood of Uniontown, addressed the gathering at the Baptist Church in the afternoon. The speaking was of a high order of merit as was the music furnished by the church choir. Rev. Kingsley made the principal address. It was his first appearance here. In his opening remarks he said he was born in Greensburg, Indiana, four days before Fort Sumter was fired upon; was an infant in arms and although it might be said he belonged to the infantry he knew very little about the Civil War. Nevertheless he made a masterful address and it is regrettable that there was not more people present to hear him. Professor Beltz of Post No. 3, Pittsburg, recited very creitably a piece of his own composition, "The Battle of Cold Harbor." G. M. Grimm, the Post commander, read a record prepared by the adjutant of the Post which showed two deaths in the post since last Memorial Day and a total loss by death since the organization in 1886 of 41, or slight y over 60 per cent of the membership

Charles Brownfield of Belvidere, Pa., was here on Memorial Day.

T. R. Lynch and family of Fairbank, visited Mrs Lynch's parents here Memorial Day

The rain destroyed hundreds of yards of bunting used for decoration on Memorial Day. The colors run out down onto the pavements making them look like they had been washed in blood.

Joseph McGill, bookkeeper for the Rich Hill Coke Company, was a borough business visitor Saturday

SMITHFIELD, June 1.—Mrs Harry Miner and baby Dona, of Winsted, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. O'Neil over Saturday and Sunday.

Ray Campbell and wife of Dunbar, visited relatives here over Memorial Day.

Dr. Charles Ryan of Pittsburg, spent Memorial Day with his parents, Rev. W. M. Ryan and wife.

G. A Feather has bought a 25-horsepower automobile.

Commander G. M Grimm and a few members of Jerry Jones Post No. 541, Grand Army of the Republic, went to the Baptist Cemetery Saturday and decorated the graves of the comrades burried there and held the customary services at the grave of Major I. M. Abraham, which service was omitted on account of the rain on Friday. This service included a salute to the dead by firing three volleys over the grave in accordance with the established custom of the Post.

W. S Bailey of Dickerson Run, participated with his Post here in the observance of Memorial Day.

George Brownfield of Braddock, spent Memorial Day here. His wife and daughter Ruth who had been here several weeks with Mrs. Brownfield's mother, Mrs. Hannah Abraham, returned with him to Braddock Monday.

Dr. James Brownfield of Fairmont, W. Va., spent Memorial Day with his sister, Miss Mary Brownfield and other relatives here.

Dress Linens---Answering Fashion's Call for Summer

White and natural linens ((all pure linen) are assembled in the wash goods stock and make a pretty showing. They are priced 20c to $1.65 a yard. Nearby are the colored dress linens in another showing, comprising everything from very fine French varieties to the heavy ramie linens for top coats. They are 35c to $1.65.

45 inch French Linens in colors, 55c yard.
36 inch Non-Krush Linens in colors, 65c yard.
36 and 45 inch unwrinkable white linen, 65c.
36 inch ramie linen 30c to 45c yard.

ANOTHER shipment of Hemstitched Embroidered pillow cases has come into the Dry Goods Store. The designs, of which there are many, are neatly worked on very good, smooth, fine muslin. Of course, the embroidery is machine work, but so accurately done that eight fingers and a pair of thumbs could not improve on it. 50c a pair.

Not six months ago the price was 98c.
